

We can see that the response time is increasing as we increase the number of thread pool. The x-axis representing hundreds of threads in the thread pool. The server performance will yield after one point. That is probably because of context switching in local machine, that is actually thrashing the thread pool to propagating forward by some bottleneck after a certain pivot point.